DIGITAL MARKETING: The novel success mantra for politicians

In 2007, the Obama campaign intertwined social networking, display ads and email programs to generate a dialogue that engaged constituents. Now, no matter which side you support, digital messaging has become a progressively more important median; predicted to grow 575% from 2012.

Digital Marketing has become a requirement of the day, no matter what field it is. It is obligatory as it helps people know and understand your business. If suitable carrying out of online branding is not done, then the business remains unknown to its probable clients.

We at PMO believes that, "the better candidate does not win, the better marketer does". For political organizations beholding to influence potential voters digital targeting is the one thing that can't be ignored. Although voting is a responsive act, there are certain transactional indicators that can help forecast where a vote might be cast. When a political model is developed at PMO, we analyse the complete holistic view of a constituent – not just the last touch point as an enumerated voter.

Digital Marketing has become a requirement of the day, no matter what field it is. It is obligatory as it helps people know and understand your business. If suitable carrying out of online branding is not done, then the business remains unknown to its probable clients.

We at PMO believes that, "the better candidate does not win, the better marketer does". For political organizations beholding to influence potential voters digital targeting is the one thing that can't be ignored. Although voting is a responsive act, there are certain transactional indicators that can help forecast where a vote might be cast. When a political model is developed at PMO, we analyse the complete holistic view of a constituent – not just the last touch point as an enumerated voter. First of all, we need to understand that digital marketing and politics both want the same thing: persuade people to do something. Convince them to buy a product. Convince them to vote for you. And convincing them takes exertion and time, of course.

HOW IS DIGITAL MARKETING HELPFUL FOR A POLITICIAN?

Digital marketing has made it tranquil for political campaigns to reach their target audience at a lesser cost equated to that required for traditional marketing. Digital marketing is taking over traditional marketing in almost every kind. This same trend is also accepted in political campaigns. Nevertheless, with the help of Digital Marketing you can produce a Buzz by the following these footprints:-

- Running Social Media (i.e. Facebook, etc) Campaigns
- Crafting your own website and showcasing your contribution to the society as a whole
- Starting the slogans and logos by highly Branding Professional experts
- Video marketing, etc

Tailoring Targeted Messages

- Our profusion of digital data and tools accessible in enabling campaigns to better tailor your messages based on the audience's values to increase your voter base.
- Our campaigns are employing intelligent dynamic resourceful optimization to put the suitable spin on your ads to get the favorite response.

Impact of Social Media on Indian Politics

- The use of social media for politicians counting Twitter, Facebook and YouTube has dramatically transformed the way campaigns are run.
- Social media played a dynamic role in deciding which party wins the most seats.
- Facebook users have a marvellous impact over the results of the polls in 160 of India's 543 constituencies.
- The youth is tech savvy and love being associated with updated trends and topics.

BEATING VOTER AD BURNOUT WITH SEQUENCING

Voters can easily tire of repetitive political ads. But digital advances in view ability tracking and cross-device analysis can benefit campaigns reduce voter tiredness. We with the help of cutting- edge technology allow campaigns to embed digital intelligence and frequency capping into their ad-serving strategies to better manage their ad sequencing.

Campaigns have customarily relied on paid ads, but the attractiveness of social media has brought limitless opportunities in unpaid advertising. This year's political picture is already full of social media happenings like YouTube videos, animated GIFs, and content intended to spark voter reaction and sharing on Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram. This unpaid advertising has proven to be very operative in persuading voter decisions.

Here are three steps to consider helping you win your digital marketing political campaign:

- Not all digital impressions are produced equal and there is a finite amount of quality (brand safe) inventory.
- Don't lose the forest for the trees and hyper target your digital audience.
- All of your crusade marketing and advertising media is essential and should work together.

What included in our Digital Marketing for Politicians

- Our team with the help of radical tools like websites, SEO, PPC, Email Marketing, ORM and many more will promote single voice through these platforms.
- Our social podium will highlight important and prevailing issues.
- We create online presence on all social media domains as we have skilled and creative team of mavens.

- Our team make sure to encourage user participation on these forums.
- We take pride in presenting you with our imaginative and unique agenda to promote you and your party on these platforms.
- Last but definitely not the least, we offer top- class solutions to the problems through these podiums.

Bottom-line

In recent years, social media have enabled some politicians and political parties to communicate directly with voters, often bypassing news organisations that have customarily mediated their ideas.

In today's era of mounting social media usage and increasing internet infiltration owing to intensified use of smartphones, digital marketing delivers the impeccable platform for political parties to interrelate with their viewers. Digital media has improved the way political parties connect with their voters, thus bridging the gap between them. Along with growing interaction, digital and social media also permits targeting the promotion and tailoring it in a way that the campaigners are trying to achieve.

Digital marketing strategy is now part of the campaign briefs and politicians/political parties are spending augmented amount of resources and time and on digital marketing. The increasing practice of digital media highlights its effective role in persuading voters and their behaviour. Digital marketing is not only a fast rising force in the current marketing field, but it is also set to be the future of marketing. It is very probable that digital media will shortly replace more traditional forms altogether.

In the end, if you belong to any political party and want to be part of it in the nigh future, this is correct place for you to get on track. We will put together this multi-faceted Digital tools series on using social media in political campaigns to give you an edge it desires to win and influence this exhilarating space.

Online Reputation Management

Reputation Management, as defined by Wikipedia, is the "practice of consistent research and analysis" of your personal or professional, business or industry reputation as represented" by the all of the content across that appears anywhere online (on the internet) on all types of online media. If someone has mentioned your name or your company name, and that comment is not a very positive one, your reputation could be at stake. Nowadays, online reputation management is very key, especially from a public relations standpoint. If someone says something that's not positive about you or your company, then you need to respond quickly.

Online Reputation Management Cost

The online reputation management cost, or fees, for personal ORM or business ORM (Online Reputation Management) and the actual cost varies widely, depending on who you hire—an agency or a consultant, such as myself.

If you've searched Google lately for someone to handle your online reputation, you'll quickly see that many others are posting their actual costs and prices. Honestly, every online reputation management case, like yours, is different. It's unique. You are a unique person or have a unique company. The actual fees cannot possibly be clearly defined in a price-sheet. They need to be defined based on your situation. Get a unique quote based on your situation.

While I do provide some example fees are below, understand that every situation is unique. There is no set-in-stone price sheet for online reputation management. There can't be. It doesn't work that way.

Pricing Chart

The following is a chart that I put together that details the online reputation management pricing and cost of my services:

Remove Offending Domain Name or Website	$4,000 one-time fee or more	Build a Personal Reputation	$4,750 per month
De-Index Report or Review from Review Website	$19,000 one-time fee	Clean Search Results in language other than English.	$9,750 per month or more
Protect Search Results	$1,750 per month or higher	Alter Search Results Pages for a Large Company.	$19,000 per month or more
Remove a Video	$9,000 one-time	Alter Search Results for Medium Company.	$5,250 per month
Suppress Major Media Article	$4,750 per month	Alter Search Results Pages for a Small Company.	$1,000 per month or more
Suppress a Minor Blog Post	$2,750 per month	Alter Search Results for a SMB Company.	$500 per month

Explanation of Fees

As you can see from the above table of our fees, there are at least 13 different scenarios where the fee for online reputation is different. The cost varies greatly, and it all depends on:

1. The issue that you want to be fixed
2. The complexity of the reputation management problem
3. The goals of your reputation management project

It all comes down to the amount of time involved. I charge for my time and my expertise. What makes me different than an online reputation management company is that you're paying for MY time, and you work only with ME. Period. I do not out source the work to others. The reputation management cost could ultimately be a lot higher—especially if you go with a reputation management company who doesn't know what they're doing and who out sources the work to others.
